International artist and licensed social worker, Imogene Drummond, has partnered with SMAN for several years. Imogene brings her re-imagining of the creation story, in her unique film presentation and art syllabus, to our students each year. Through the use of color and guided artistic creations, the students are empowered to value the created world around them, as well as ponder their irreplaceable place in the universe. This evocative project-based program is a winner for the boys. Through their creations, they are often found express things which had previously gone unspoken. Blending individual expression and therapy is a perfect complement to our effort in building emotional strength and social awareness.
